(4) The court shall, except in any case where the child has legal representation, allow the parents or guardian or, in their absence, any relative or other responsible person to assist the child in conducting his defence.

(5) If in any case where the child is not represented or assisted in his defence as provided in subsection (4), the child, instead of asking questions by way of cross-examination, makes assertions, the court shall then put to the witness such questions as it thinks necessary on behalf of the child and may for this purpose question the child in order to bring out or clear up any point arising out of such questions.

(6) If, when the evidence against the child has been heard, the court is of the opinion that a case is made out against the child sufficiently to require him to make a defence in respect of the offence charged or some other offence which the court is competent to try, they shall consider the charge against the child and decide whether it is sufficient and, if necessary, amend the charge.

(7) If the charge is amended the substance of the offence alleged in it as amended shall then be explained by the court to the child in simple language suitable to his age and understanding, and he shall be asked whether or not he admits the truth of the charge.

(a) be sworn or affirmed, as the case may be;

(b) give evidence;

(c) answer any question lawfully put to him by the court or in cross-examination; or

(d) produce any document or thing which he is required to produce, such refusal or neglect may be taken into account by the court in reaching its decisions.

(11) Where the child elects to call witnesses other than himself evidence shall be taken before that of such other witnesses.

(12) After the child, and his witnesses, if any, have given their evidence and after their examination, cross-examination and re-examination, if any, the court shall give its judgment.

(13) If the child admits the offence or the court is satisfied that it is proved that the child is responsible for the offence, the child and his parent, guardian or appropriate adult, if present, shall then be asked if he, and such parent, guardian, or appropriate adult, desires to say anything in extenuation or mitigation of the penalty or otherwise and before deciding how to deal with the child, the court shall obtain such information as to general conduct, character, home surroundings, school record and medical history, as may enable the court to deal with the case in the best interests of the child, and may put to the child any question arising out of such information which may include any written report of a probation officer or registered medical practitioner or other appropriate person which may be received and considered by the court without being read aloud.

(14) For the purpose of obtaining the information required under subsection (13), or for special medical examination or observation, the court may from time to time remand the child on bail or to a place of detention.

(15) Where the court has received and considered a written report of a probation officer, a registered medical practitioner or other appropriate person—

(c) if the child or the parent or guardian having been told the substance of any part of a report, desires to produce evidence with reference thereto, the court, if it thinks the evidence is material, shall adjourn the proceedings for the production of further evidence, and shall, if necessary, require the attendance at the adjourned hearing of the person who made the report.
